Bright Ideas

1. It is said that the Ancient Romans invented ice cream, which was made of snow with fruit and honey. But who was the ice lolly invented by? Believe it or not, it was invented by an eleven-year-old boy. One very cold night in 1905, Frank Epperson left his drink outside with a wooden "stirring stick" in it. In the morning Frank picked up the frozen drink on the stick. Although it looked strange, it tasted fantastic! When he grew up, Frank started an ice lolly company. Billions of ice lollies are eaten every year in America.

2. What is the connection between pies and a great game? No idea? Well, about fifty years ago the Frisbee Pie Company delivered delicious pies to American college students. The pies were delivered in metal tins. After they had eaten the pies, students played a game with the tins. They threw the lids and ran to catch them. And that's how the game of Frisbee was invented! Later, a lighter Frisbee was designed by Walter Morrison. It was made of plastic, so it flew much further than the tins. Now Frisbee championships are held every year in many countries.

3. Imagine you have a computer with no mouse, no keyboard and no joy pad. And you can't move your hands either. How can you search the Internet, create a file or upload your photos? Some computer companies have recently invented a plastic hat which can read signals from your brain. Although this seems impossible, objects on the screen are controlled using your brain waves! A lot more research will be done before it appears in the shops, but the technology already exists.

Famous for Fifteen!

Jamie Oliver is Britain's most famous chef. He made his first TV cooking programmes when he was only 23, got married at 25 and was given a special award by the Queen at 28. A top supermarket pays to use him in their advertisements, he sells almost as many books as J.K. Rowling, and journalists are always writing articles about him.

Jamie has also opened the restaurant Fifteen in London. The name doesn't describe the street number. It describes the number of young people he chose to become cooks there. Not one of them knew how to cook, so Jamie sent them to college in the year before he opened the restaurant.

Fifteen really started because of a conversation Jamie had with his wife's friend. She worked with difficult children and found that they always enjoyed cooking, so Jamie decided to start a restaurant business to help young people with problems.

Jamie is at the restaurant five days a week but always spends weekends with his wife and children. He says he has never been happier and only wants to go on cooking. He works hard but pays himself nothing, because all the money is used to train new students every six months. Today, 85 people work at Fifteen many more than when it first opened. The restaurant is always full and Jamie has four receptionists answering more than 3,000 phone calls a day from customers wanting to book a table.
